

The Crittenden Press
THURSDAY: APR. 29. 1886
BY R. C. WALKER.

The Knights of Labor has a membership of 500,000.

Near Keyport, N. J. an insane mother brained three of her children with an ax and poisoned herself.

Whisky was voted out of Shawneetown, Ill., at a town election last week. The total vote was 385, and a majority of 82 were against whisky.

The Slaking Fund Commissioners visited the convict camp at Greenwood Saturday. As the Legislature put the settling of the convict question in the hands of those commissioners they have a knotty problem on hand.

The lower House of the Legislature passed a bill Friday providing that every fence, it rains, plank, iron, stone or wire, five feet high or orange orange and wire combined, four feet high or a ditch three feet deep and three feet broad, with a hedge two feet high, shall be a lawful fence.

The stock the railroad company proposes to issue to this county and precinct, upon a favorable vote, will be worth something. It may be 50 cents on the dollar or it may be five cents on the dollar. At any rate it will contribute something towards diminishing the $40,000.

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature making it unlawful for a member to accept a pass from any railroad under a penalty of being fined $200. After using passes during the entire session, it would be bad test for the members to make such a law just at the close of the session.

Through an oversight, the printer last week credited the article regarding the circuit judgeship to the Henderson Gleaser, when it should have been credited to the Henderson News. The Gleaser is spending more time in the interest of the Gleaser than in the contest for the circuit judgeship, while the News is pouring hot shot into Judge Cissell and the Journal is shooting boomerangs at Judge Glens.

Inform yourself on the railroad proposition. Get a copy of the FAMES, and with a determination to see for yourself, read the election notice carefully; make a calculation of what your taxes will be, write the figures down, look at them and then determine whether or not the road will be worth that much to you, to your county, and to your children who will follow you.

Two years ago Lydia Burnett and myself were sweethearts. She discarded me in 1884. Shortly afterwards year, which ends June 30, 1886, there was an increase of over $7,000,000 in the revenues of the Government, as compared with the same period last year. The expenditures were over $16,000,000 less than for the same period in the preceding year, making a net saving of $23,000,000.

Unquestionably there are men now for the railroad subscription who were opposed to it at first glance. A thorough investigation of the proposition and a clear understanding of all the details reveals the fact that nothing is said about the right of way, the company agreeing to build the road if a favorable vote is given on the proposition. The sum is not $50,000, but only $40,000, just one-tenth of what Caldwell county subscribed. Let the voters of Crittenden consider these facts, and it will be seen that we are not advocating an unreasonable measure.

According to the Auditor's report there is $2,022,823 worth of taxable property in Crittenden county. The railroad proposition asks for subscription of $25,000 from the entire county. To pay this amount at one time, in one year, would require a tax of $1.25 on each $100 worth of property—a man having a farm valued at $1000 would pay $12.50 tax. Bear in mind this rate would not run twenty years, nor 10 years, nor 5 years, but this rate of taxation would be just one year. We learn that Caldwell county pays 75 cents on the $100 worth of property every year. Crittenden, at this rate, would pay the $25,000, together with the cost of collection, in two years, and have a surplus in the treasury. Make your own calculation of this.

Mr. W. D. Brantley, one of our most extensive stock traders, is enthusiastically for the railroad subscription and gives one good reason why the stock raisers, who are his customers, should be for the tax: He buys cattle and hogs, and has them delivered and weighed, either at his farm or at the shipping points, which is at Princeton and points on the Ohio river. For those delivered at the shipping points he pays one quarter of a cent more than for those delivered at his house, which is some twelve miles from the river, and twenty or more miles from Princeton. Thus it can readily be seen that with a shipping point at this place the men who sell the stock saves the quarter cent, or 25 cents on the hundred. This is no far-fetched argument; no course of reasoning is required to make it clear. It is a transparent illustration and every man who sells over a calf should take a business view of the matter. Mr. Brantley is a responsible man, owns and runs a farm, and what he says is true.

THOU SHALT NOT KILL.

Robert Fowler Pays the Penalty of the Law on Earth for Violation of the Thirteenth Commandment.

[From the Union Local.]

The penalty was paid by Fowler yesterday and as we have stated, so much has been said of the case, we will now be as brief as possible in noting the incidents (and accident) of the execution. The time set had been between the hours of twelve and two o'clock, but Fowler desired to earlier—at six o'clock in the morning, but the Sheriff split the time, and at a few minutes after 10 he was prepared inside of the jail for the scaffold. He walked bravely up the steps and halted upon the trap, after which the officers in charge—Sheriff James S. Blue and Jailer Louis Curry, questioned him as to his desire to address the assembly. Fowler, after a pause, in a clear voice then said:

"Gentlemen, I have left my statement with Mr. Curry; you can all see it tomorrow in black and white. I acknowledge the deed and the punishment is just; but live men swore to lies against me; I can name them if it is necessary. After a short pause several voices in the assembly called out: name them, yes name them all. Fowler then repeated the names loud enough to be heard by half the people there, as follows: Jack Hill, John Will Taylor, Harry Fellows, Henry Poo and Marion Whitledge. The officers then asked Fowler if he had anything further to say, and were answered "no." They then asked him if he wished to pray, to which he said no; then if he wished any one to pray for him, and to this he said yes. There being no minister present John E. Kelley, of Henderson, a devoted member of the Roman Catholic church, made a neat statement that his church allowed its members to officiate in cases where no minister was present. Mr. Kelley then repeated the Lord's Prayer and read the Litany of the Saints, in an impressive manner, to which strict attention was given. The Sheriff then placed the black cap and loop of rope over Fowler's head, and in an instant the trap was sprung and the doomed man fell, to the ground—the rope breaking within an inch of where it was fastened to the beam overhead. The body was in a second or two lifted and the rope again made fast, and there allowed to hang for thirty minutes, when the physicians in attendance declared life extinct.

FOWLER'S CONFESSION.
MORGANFIELD JAIL, April 28, '86.
8:30 P. M.

Two years ago Lydia Burnett and myself were sweethearts. She discarded me in 1884. Shortly afterwards married the widow Stanley, the mother of Lydia Burnett. After my marriage, about three or four months, she set about to break up the peace of my relations with my wife by tantalizing me in every crowd she caught me in. This went on for twelve or eighteen months, when I began to hate her; she kept up teasing me until I made up my mind to destroy her; my purpose on Thursday in going into the Coleman field was really to look for my hogs. I did not then have any plan laid to take her life. On Sunday evening being sick I went up into my field and laid down by a tree, the same described by me before my trial. I then left the tree and went into the Coleman field and from there to the road where I met Lida Burnett. I had not been on the big road and was not seen by Harry Fellows nor by any one else. When Lydia Burnett came up she rode close to me and struck me twice with a switch in the face, leaving a mark. I then grabbed her by the neck and dragged her off to her horse. We scuffled down into the woods a short distance, she being on the ground, when I cut her throat with the same knife exhibited in the trial, making two strokes in accomplishing my purpose. I immediately left the body and started in a trot for home, crossing the first fence about where the blood was found. I washed my hands in the branch above the pool described in the trial, and from there went home across the ridges. I did not go down the branch as described by the witnesses, but made the tracks there found on the Thursday before. I did not stop until I reached my cornfield, where I cut a deal of corn which I took through the yard, as described by the witnesses; my conduct after reaching home was correctly described by the witnesses.

The clothes exhibited to the jury were the same I had on when I committed the deed; I pulled them off that night and put the breeches the next morning in the smoke house; my wife put away the shirt; I hung up the hat if there was blood on it somebody else put it there. I went to bed but could not sleep—my mind prevented me. When John Gobin came for me to help search for Lydia Burnett, I agreed to go with him but Whitworth told me there was no use in my going; I felt sick; did not feel much like traveling. When I saw the crowd coming the next day, I knew they were coming after me, I knew three hours before that they would come. I was then arrested, brought to the Morganfield jail, the next day taken back to the Gobin school house for an examining trial, which I waived.

Everybody knows the facts developed by my trial; I was snake bitten about the first of June by a copperhead, and came near dying from it.

It would have been a God's blessing to me that my people had died then.

The effects of this life partially damaged my mind, more at some times than at others. After the trial the treatment of Lydia Burnett affected me more than before and the feeling grew on me continuously, until it controlled me completely. On the Sunday when I killed her, in the evening my mind was in a worse state than usual, and had it not been, I would not have committed the deed.

Two hours afterwards I would have given my own life to have restored Lydia Burnett's. During eight months confinement and reflection, this temptation given me great deal of trouble.

The hope that I would get out of this trouble kept me from making this confession until now. I don't believe I deserve death from the fact my mind was not right when I killed Lydia Burnett. I want it distinctly understood that my wife was no party to the deed I committed. She did not know then nor does she know now I am guilty.

She made me a good wife, affectionate, kind and attentive, and I wish I could do something to honor her memory.

My father and mother did everything they could to make me a good boy and a useful man. Their whole duty has been discharged to me.

I am one of eight children, all living, of whom two are boys, myself one of them. Though poor, our parents raised us up to be honest, industrious and sober; my mother is a true Christian and did her best to make me one. I tried to follow the teachings of my parents and to conduct myself so as to have the respect of my neighbors. I have made peace with my God, and believe that through Christ I am forgiven my great sin. I was asked by brother Wad whether or not I desired to join a church. I asked Bro. Wall if baptism is essential to salvation. He answered that if the heart is right it is not essential. If I believe that my heart is right and that I shall be saved, anyhow, I have not been baptised.

I make this confession for the good of the boys growing into manhood, that they may profit by my example, and not let their minds lead them astray.

I desire to thank my friends for all they have done for me in the hour of my greatest trouble, and especially to Messrs. D. H. Hughes and C. L. Long, my attorneys, for their untiring labors to build up for me a good defence. They did all that men could do to save me, for which I thank them. My thanks are due Mr. Curry, the jailer, and his family, for their many kindnesses to me during my imprisonment. Every act and every word that could give comfort to my body or my mind, they have most cheerfully granted me; may God bless and reward them.

I hope my friends and the friends of Lydia Burnett will forgive me for what I have done, and think of me as I used to be. Respect my parents; for they deserve it; let not my crime be visited on them. They are good people, and I hope their neighbors will do all in their power to make their declining years as comfortable and pleasant to them as their merit deserves.

Do not humiliate my sister and brothers by throwing up to them my death. They are not responsible for what I have done.

What I have stated in this, my confession, is the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

ROBERT N. FOWLER.
Attest: C. L. Long, Louis Curry.

Sam's Promises.
During the canvass, last summer, for the Legislature, Sam Nunn told the people that if he was elected, among other things he would do was to endeavor to have a bill passed providing that pro ten judges should be paid by the regular Judges and not by the State. Just how faithful Sam has been to his promise the Courier-Journal correspondent will show.

Mr. Nunn called up out of the orders of the day the bill providing that pro ten Judges shall be paid at the rate of $7, a day out of the salary of regular Judges. Mr. Nesbitt opposed the bill, which he said would be a dead letter on the statute books. Mr. Nunn said people all over the State wanted the bill passed. In any other business, when a man hired a substitute he paid his salary out of his own pocket, and Judges ought to do the same thing.

A mass convention held at Hon. Sam Nunn's home endorsed the course of their popular representative with three cheers and a tiger. That is said to mean that Sam's friends are preparing to laud him in the Senate next year.

Sam Nunn has made an exceptionally faithful representative for Crittenden and Livingston counties, and we are not surprised to hear of his home endorsement. His record will carry him higher, if he is willing to go.—Paducah News.

There are some good crops of tobacco in this country that are yet uncut. Some farmers are so greedy that they are not willing to take a reasonable price for their crops and after considerable wastage have to sell at a reduced price or not at all. No economy in this, as first sales are nearly always the best, both of produce and live stock.

The tobacco stemmies that have been built in this country have been of immense benefit to the farmers of the country. WASHINGTON, April 21.—An old member of the House said that the State had made such an advance in its representation in the House as the State of Kentucky has in the Congress. Kentucky will regain her lost influence in legislation by sending such men to Congress."

The Olden Time.

On the third day of April 1843, just 43 years ago the 3d day of this month myself and my three traveling companions, started on a journey to North Carolina. We traveled on horseback, each of us provided with an overcoat, an umbrella and a pair of leather saddle bags, not quite so large but very much like a pair of No. 3 United States Mail bags.

I remember that we passed up through Fredonia and Princeton and stayed all night in Hepkinstville, passed on through Trenton, Keyburg, Cross Plains on to Galatintown, stayed all night at Castillon Springs, crossed the Cumberland river at Treadwell's Ferry, went up the ridge or mountain by oldsters Turnpike gate, took the old Emory road by Montgomery on to Knoxville East Tennessee, went up the French Broad River, passed Dandridge and Newport, crossed the line between Tennessee and North Carolina at the Point Rock, went by the Warm Spring on to Ashville in Ducombe county, crossed the Blue Ridge at the Hickory Nat Gap.

At Rutherfordton two of our company took the road to Raleigh, while myself and the other one went by the way Lincolnton to Charlotte in Mecklinburg county between Lincolnton and Charlotte, we forded the Catawba River at the famous Tuckasego Ford. The Catawba is a wide and rapid stream, but not very deep. The first thing that attracted our attention when we came in sight of Charlotte, was the United States Mint, which has since been burnt down and rebuilt.

Charlotte is noted as being the place where the good people of Mecklinburg county met in convention on the 5th of May, 1775, and declared themselves free and independent and adopted the famous Mecklinburg Resolutions. The good people of Mecklinburg county celebrated the 20th day of May as their Independence day, even down to the present time. The greatest military display that ever witnessed in my life was on the 20th day of May, 1843.

In time of the Revolutionary War, Charlotte was occupied for a short time by Lord Cornwallis and his army, when they left their camp at the village on fire and burnt it to ashes.

From a memorandum that I kept I made the distance from here to Charlotte, Mecklinburg county, N. C., to be 527 miles, this distance we traveled in sixteen days, however, we arrived in Charlotte the sixteenth day, about 12 o'clock. This distance could now be traveled in about so many hours.

D. N. STRICKLAND.

A few Random Thoughts.

Thanks for the knowledge of Kentucky's Legislative power. It, like many other unutilized powers tells not its power and glory until it is a subject.

Remember, we do not decide there is power in every noise. If we could, we would have believed that every State in the Union had a superior to Kentucky in wisdom's way, because Kentucky's students are not charging and puffing, snoring and snuffing at every atomical thought, it is not to say she is destitute of life and of wisdom.

Because Kentucky has not the same number of academy's and colleges as some of the foremost eastern States of the Union, is not to say it is dragging or struggling near the rear. A few good schools, with competent teachers will indeed develop our State sooner than an independent excess of worthless schools.

If a smith learns he has not been making plows to suit his customers, he should change his programme and will if he uses discretion. As a duty the same applies to every avocation of life. The world has too many pretenders, too many scoundrels, too many mimics. At first sight they have their impression, but at last they will fall. If it is your expectation to aid in securing a crown for Kentucky, be ready to lend a helping hand, whatever your occupation may be.

But remember if this is not done in a pleasant manner you will have despisers. Do not act contemptibly with your customers if you wish to be represented. Have patience and make your labor easy by cheerfulness.

X. Y. Z.

Winston, Ky. 1886.

Having heard some complaint from the defeated candidates, I will say as one of the Salt river passengers that I think as far as I could see the convention went off right and fair; we had 21 of the best looking men in our country to sit on our case, and every candidate was his own counsel and pled his own case, and those 21 gentlemen, after hearing the evidence and pleading retired to deliberate upon our cases, brought in a verdict nominating the best looking and sending the ugly ones up Salt river for four years with good behavior, with a pledge to vote for the nominees and the penalty if they should fail to do so to be sent off with Oscar Turner, Maine, Butler & Co. I will just say to the boys to have your hats ready and your canisters filled with good old water or something else. The cannon will be aboard and when the bell on the old Salt river packet taps all get aboard. Now I do not know whether the Captain will go up until after the first Monday in August. He may not want to make two trips; but let that be as may be ready.

Now I say in conclusion that we have good men for candidates, well qualified to fill the offices to which they aspire. Then let us rally to our standard bearers, do our whole duty, and victory will surely perch upon our banner.

Wheat Prospects.

CHICAGO, April 18.—The following crop summary appeared in the Farmer's Review:

The chief feature of the crop returns up to the close of the week is contained in the uniformly gloomy tenor of the reports from Kansas. The reports from Kansas for the last six weeks have indicated only a partial crop, but the latest bulletins predict an almost total failure in a number of counties, while at the best there is the promise to exceed not one third of the average yield for the entire State. The reports from Missouri county are that the prospect is the worst even known and that the yield will not pay for the cutting. The prospect in Nebraska county is bad, and already many fields are being plowed under. In Ottawa county fully 50 per cent. of the crop is reported to be winter killed, while in Sedgewick county the prospect is not more than 25 per cent. of a crop. In some of the Southern counties the prospect is somewhat more favorable. But a beautiful yield does not seem to promise in any portion of the State. The prospect in Michigan shows no improvement, and in many counties wheat is reported to be going back work, on account of the recent dry and freezing weather. In some of the counties a great deal of the wheat is reported lying on top of the ground. In Lawrence and two other counties indications of the Russian fly are reported. Except in these two States the prospect is not only excellent, but in many the prospects are flattering for winter wheat. In some portions of Ohio the recent storms have left the ground full of water, which, with the accompanying cold weather, has threatened the growing plants; but as a rule the reports are very favorable. In all Southern Indiana the fields are green and the plant healthy. Very little seedling has been done either in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa or Nebraska, and in the two last named States, seedling threatens to be delayed twenty to thirty days. In many portions of Nebraska the season is already so far advanced that a number of large tracts of land will be seeded to grass.

English Capital in America.
[Frank Burr in Boston Herald.]
The Aurania arrived from Europe this afternoon. It had a stormy passage, and was twenty-four hours late. An hour after the steamer landed, I saw three Englishmen. One of them was a friend of mine, the other two were capitalists. One representing a London syndicate, having $200,000 has invested in the Denver and Rio Grand Railroad. He came over to look after what is left of it. Very little, I fear. The other had $500,000 invested in mining property in the West. This trio of foreigners interested me for several reasons. They are all types of a class in which the people of this country are very much interested, and they are very much interested in this country and its people. My English friend had just run over to London and sold a mining property. He said to me: "You would be surprised at the amount of English capital that is now being poured into the United States. The idle money of the England is all looking toward this country, and people who have cash to invest believe in the future of the United States. Some of them have been badly bitten here. A great deal of English money has been lost in railroads and in mines, but there is a general feeling that the country has a great future. I think that what has been lost has been through bad judgment in following false leads. Englishmen do not forget that in any of the Western mines have for 10 or 12 years paid dividends of from 15 to 20 per cent, and that their capital, with more interest than they could get in London, has been returned to them, if they get nothing in the future."

Announcements.
County Clerk.
To the voters of Crittenden county: I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Clerk of the Crittenden county court, and I promise the people a faithful and impartial discharge of the duties of the office if elected. I will devote every energy to so perform the duties of the office as to merit your esteem and support.

WILLIAM HILL.
To the voters of Crittenden county: I take pleasure in announcing to you that I am a candidate for re-election to the office of County Court Clerk, and permit me to return you my sincere thanks and the gratitude of my heart for your kindness to me in the past; I shall ever remember with gratitude, whether you ever give me the office again or not. And in presenting my claims again for your consideration I do not want you for a moment to think that I claim you are under any more obligations to me than you are to others, for this I have no superior claim to the office above that of my humblest fellow citizen. No my friends, I make no such claims, but I do claim that I feel myself under obligation to you for the position that I now hold, and since I have been your Clerk I have tried to discharge all my official duties faithfully and impartially, but how far there I have come I know not, doubtless I have committed errors, but in this you will hear with me, as you know the frailty of human nature. But if you will again give me the office, it will be a precious boon to me and will be appreciated to the fullest extent. But if you believe I have been unfaithful to the trust confided to me, I encourage myself in the duty to elect some worthy man instead of myself. But I trust that you will give me your favorable consideration, and if elected I will use every endeavor to make you a faithful and efficient officer, by being at my post on duty and discharging all official duties without partiality, as I have ever tried to do in the past. In conclusion, again permit me to thank you for your past acts of kindness and assure you that I will ever remember you with gratitude whether you re-appoint me as your clerk or not.

I am as ever your obedient servant,
J. H. WOODS.
